

FULL PAY MEN FILL HONOR ROLL

175 Employers Share the Sacrifices of Those Called to Colors.

B. R. T. VOLUNTEERS
FOR $9,000 A MONTH

Hard Pan Patriots Pledge Jobs
Back, Place in Line and Insurance if Killed.

Hard pan patriots—business men who are willing to go deep into their pockets for their country while their employees go to the firing line for their country—enrolled in the business men's roll of honor last week to the number of 175.

The business men's roll of honor is the list of employers, who are willing to share with their men, the burden involved in going to the front for Uncle Sam. It includes those men, who have volunteered to care for the wives, mothers and children of guardsmen while the guardsmen are in service and getting only $14 a month. It is the roll of those who have heard the guardsmen's remark, "I'd like to go, but there's the wife and children," and have come to the rescue with the cold cash.

B. R. T. to Pay $9,000 a Month.

Among the 175 business men are some of the largest employing firms in the city and some of the smallest. There is the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, whose manager said yesterday: "Of course, it's not important, but it may be of interest that the loss to us will be $9,000 a month." And there is the small, unheard-of fellow, trying to keep his concern going, who said yesterday: "I have only one employee in the Guard, and I wish with all my heart that I could pay him his full salary for as long as he may be away. There's nothing I would like better. But I can't promise that, for the simple reason that I might not be able to do it. But I did promise him this when he left—that I'd see to it that his wife and children didn't want for anything while he was gone, even if I had to go hungry myself."

The roll is no respecter of nationalities. German firm names punctuate the list, and among the early recruits was the Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Company, Ltd. Department stores of the city have been among the first and most generous in their response to the call to the colors. Before the call of the executive committee of the Merchants' Association had gone out, praising the spirit of the militiamen and recommending that employers be actuated by a similar patriotism, B. Altman & Co. had lined up with the City of New York in a promise to every guardsman in their employ that his full salary would be paid to his dependents while he was gone.

Forty-five Go from Altman's.

Michael Friedsam, president of the company, announced to the forty-five militiamen in the employ of the Altman store that they would have leave of absence for as long as they were with the colors; that they would receive full pay while they were away; would be kept in line of promotion and their jobs would be waiting for them when they came back. For good measure, the Altman store added a comfort kit to its godspeed to the departing soldiers.

The New York John Wanamaker store has always encouraged preparedness, and the Tiet Regiment has a machine gun section composed entirely of men from the Wanamaker store. Twenty-five other men are scattered through other regiments. Managers of Wanamaker's have already made arrangements to send a man's full salary to him, to turn it over to a designated relative or to put it in the bank for the militiaman and hand the entire sum with interest, over to him upon his return from Mexico.

Salaries and Insurance by Macy's.

R. H. Macy & Co., immediately following the call of President Wilson, sent a letter to each of the forty-two guardsmen in the store's employ promising not only the payment of their full salaries while away, but also guaranteeing the payment of $500 insurance to a designated heir, if the militiaman met death. This offer is good until January 1, 1917, when the plan will be reconsidered.

"Of course we will pay the salaries of men while they are doing military duty," was the response yesterday of Saks & Co. "A dozen of our men have gone. No man from this store shall lose because he does his duty."

A representative of the Gimbel Brothers Company told the thirty-two men leaving that store for military duty that their pay would be sent to their wives while they were away, and that, instead of losing by their absence, they would return to their employers "more appreciated than ever."

Abraham & Straus Have 200 in Guard.

Abraham & Straus, of Brooklyn, said that the call to arms would cost them nearly two hundred men, but that all would have full pay and leaves of absence. Other companies granting the same were Butler Brothers, in their store in all cities; Best & Co., Fredrick Loewer & Co., the Rogers Peet Company, Franklin Simon & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co.

The child restaurants, heavy contributors to the national guards of many states, will pay salaries and hold positions for all of its employee-militiamen. The United Cigar Stores, even more thoroughly distributed among the states, will also give full pay. The Sheffield Farms-Slack-Decker Milk Company saw its treasurer, Thomas W. Decker, answer the call to arms, and immediately announced to its employees that every one of its guardsmen answering the call would have full pay while doing militia duty.

A group insurance amounting to more than a quarter of a million dollars has been taken out by the U. T. Hungerford Brass and Copper Company to cover the lives of its employee-militiamen. By the terms of this insurance, which is paid for by the company, a life insurance of one year's salary will be paid to relatives in case of the death of a militiaman. These employees will also receive full pay.

James Newton Gunn, president of the United States Tire Company, made good on his preparedness announcement yesterday with the following announcement to his men: "We have been prime movers in the campaign for adequate national preparedness. Some time ago a recruiting meeting for the National Guard was held under the auspices of the United States Rubber Company. Any of you men who want to go to Plattsburg may have two weeks' extra vacation to do so. Any of you men who want to go to the front will get full pay every day you are gone."

Consolidated Swings in Line.

The board of governors of the Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York stopped at no halfway measure. All in one swoop they announced that any employee of the exchange who "now belongs to the National Guard, or who may enlist in the guard or any other branch of the armed forces of the United States" will receive full pay while away, and find his position waiting for him upon his return.

The details of the generous and spontaneous manner in which New York's business men have met the President's call to the colors, and voluntarily accepted a burden second only to the task assumed by the men who will actually tread the hot and dusty Mexican trails and face the enemy bullets, might be continued indefinitely. Following is the Business Men's Roll of Honor—the employers who will pay in full or in substantial part the salaries of their employee-militiamen who bear arms for their country:

FIGHT PITCHED BATTLE FOR BRIGHTON HOTEL

Rival Managers Lead Armies of Employees—One Is Arrested.

The struggle for supremacy as manager of the Brighton Beach Hotel, which has thus far confined itself to legal strategy, yesterday became a pitched battle between two forces of hotel employees under the command of John F. Reynolds and William Webber, both of whom claim the title.

Webber's men, who held the hotel when the Reynolds contingent arrived, were eventually victorious, and the attacking party beat a hasty retreat when their leader was arrested on a charge of grand larceny and led before Magistrate Voorhees in Coney Island police court.

Earlier in the day Deputy Sheriff Walter J. Bryan had served injunctions on Webber and his lieutenants, William H. Ormes, Walter Jones, W. I. Kilpatrick and August Emmerich, together with a summons to appear in Kings county court Monday morning. Following this move, Captain John Linden, of the Coney Island police, sent a sergeant and ten men to the hotel, but all was quiet until the late afternoon, when Reynolds attempted to take possession.

Injunctions, writs of restraint and other legal formulae have been used by both sides to obtain control of the hotel. Just to whom the management rightfully belongs no one seems to know. The master stroke, which landed Reynolds in the police station, was the work of George S. O'Neill, a wine steward. He charges that Reynolds gave him a check for $200 which proved worthless. Reynolds was released on $1,000 bail.

JUMP ENDS SLOW DEATH

White Plague Loses Victim on Blackwell's Island.

Joseph Barker escaped a lingering death by tuberculosis yesterday by plunging from the third story of the Metropolitan Hospital on Blackwell's Island, dying instantly. He had been a patient at the hospital for more than a year and had become convinced that he would remain there until his death. A fellow patient was seated on a third floor veranda when Barker walked from his room and to the surrounding ledge, carrying a chair in his hand. The patient said that he thought Barker was about to seat himself when he suddenly stepped upon the chair and plunged to the ground.

"WORTHLESS" LOT VALUABLE

Astoria Property Woman Abandoned Brings Her $3,000.

Seventeen years ago, when Mrs. John F. Buckhout, of Greenwich, Conn., inherited a small lot on Grand Avenue, Astoria, she considered it worthless and refused to record the deed and pay taxes on the land. Since that time she has not visited Astoria, and did not know that a flourishing section had sprung up around her lot.

Two weeks ago a Queens County contractor called upon her and offered $3,000 cash for her "worthless" lot. The deed was recorded for the first time yesterday in the Queens County Clerk's office at Jamaica. Before title can pass to the contractor Mrs. Buckhout will have to settle $1,500 unpaid taxes and assessments.

CORN PRODUCTS MUST DISSOLVE

Judge Hand Sees $80,000-
000 Corporation as a
Menace to Trade.

Judge Learned Hand, in a decision filed yesterday in the Federal Court, ordered the dissolution of the Corn Products Refining Company, an $80,000,000 corporation, chartered in New Jersey in 1906. The National Starch Company, the Novelty Candy Company, the St. Louis Syrup and Refining Company, subsidiary corporations, and several individual defendants are named in the dissolution decree, which condemns the business practices of the combination in severe terms.

Judge Hand refused to exempt from the injunction James Speyer, A. B. Boardman, C. H. Kelsey and W. H. Nichols, Jr., directors for three years before the government's petition was filed. The form of the decree, Judge Hand says, will in general follow that in the case of the United States versus the International Harvester Company, except that the time within which to file a plan of dissolution will be 120 days, instead of ninety, and that the plan will be filed with the Federal Trade Commission as master in chancery. The commission will present a plan, which will come before the District Court for confirmation.

The designation of the Federal Trade Commission to act as master in chancery to present a dissolution plan provides the first instance in which this body has been called upon to aid in dissolving a corporation held culpable under the Sherman act.

The litigation against the company is one of the longest and most expensive that the government has undertaken since the passage of the anti-trust law. It was inaugurated in 1913, since which time more than 300 witnesses have been examined in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Memphis and Atlanta. Fees for counsel, stenographers and witnesses have far exceeded $25,000.

Judge Hand's decision, which covers ninety-five typewritten pages, relates the prices and manipulation of prices and efforts of the defendant companies to fix prices and to restrict production by the dismantling of plants and the suppression of proposed companies.

"Transit privileges," which were heavy advantages in favor of the Edgewater plant of the Corn Products Refining Company, are also mentioned. "The Corn Products Refining Company's industrial history has not only been characterized throughout by attempts to create spurious competition," says Judge Hand, "but we have the richest possible evidence that they never meant to maintain it as a policy, but only to drive out weaker competitors so as to maintain the field."

"All their conduct illustrates the kind of competition which tries to prevent the development of newcomers who might permanently secure their own position."

After referring to the defendant's contention that dissolution would have a disastrous effect upon the foreign trade and would involve the expenditure of large sums of money, Judge Hand says: "None of these considerations seem to be sufficient to prevail over the wisdom of disintegrating a combination which has shown such an inveterate and incorrigible insistence upon interfering with the course of commerce which the law demands."

"That the general organization of the Corn Products Refining Company would be disrupted, would, of course, follow it, is, indeed, the very purpose of the relief itself. Such loss as is involved in removing from the stockholders' hands the power which they have so consistently used contrary to law is an inevitable though unfortunate incident in the enforcement of the statute."

Speaking of the decision last night, Morgan J. O'Brien, of counsel for the defendant company, said:

"It is a great disappointment, and we will, of course, lodge an immediate appeal. The fundamental point in the case is exactly the same as that involved in the Harvester case. The theory of Judge Hand's decision is the same theory as that upon which the Harvester decision was based. The latter decision has been carried to the Supreme Court, where it is still pending."
